

“Vicariously, television viewers readily accept what they see on the screens as personal experience and as unquestionable fact...the cathode ray tube has become a glass-faced altar. Although familiar to nearly everyone worldwide, very few are aware of how the modern medium evolved.”

"Vicariamente, los televidentes aceptan fácilmente lo que ven en las pantallas como una experiencia personal y un hecho incuestionable ... el tubo de rayos catódicos se han convertido en un altar de vidrio. Aunque es familiar para casi todo el mundo, muy pocos saben cómo evolucionó el medio moderno ".

— Steve Gompf
Executive Director, Director Ejecutivo
Television Museum International/ Museo Televisor Internacional